DuPont safety questioned after OSHA fines, deaths

DuPont workplace incidents since 2007
DuPont, once viewed as the gold standard for worker safety, is facing heavy criticism from employee unions and government agencies after a series of high-profile accidents and deaths at its plants across the country.

Roll over each dot for details.

Burnside Plant — Darrow, La.
Total employees: 400
About the plant: The plant manufactures and processes sulfuric acid
Incident: An employee filed a whistleblower suit alleging the company retaliated against him for reporting gas leaks. A jury found the leaks did not pose a threat to the public, but a federal judge vacated the decision. The judge ruled DuPont withheld crucial information about the leaks and the lawsuit is headed for another trial.
